

---

Welcome letter

---

Randall S. Schuler

HRM Department, 202 Levin Bldg.,
Rutgers University and GSBA Zurich,
94 Rockefeller Road, Piscataway, NJ 08854, USA
E-mail: schuler@rci.rutgers.edu

Biographical notes: Randall S. Schuler is Professor of Strategic International Human Resource Management at Rutgers University and a Research Professor at GSBA Zurich. His research interests are global and international human resource management, strategic human resource management, the human resource management function in organisations and the interface of business strategy and human resource management tasks. He has written extensively in academic and professional journals and has just published a book with Dennis Briscoe entitled International Human Resource Management, 2e. He is a co-editor, along with Susan Jackson, Paul Sparrow and Michael Poole, of the GLOBAL HRM Series, a series of 20 books about international human resource management.

---

The world is indeed getting more global, more challenging, more complex, more exciting and more dynamic every day! Together, all of these qualities create an intense interest to learn as much about the world today as possible. The European Journal of International Management is being created specifically to help serve this desire. Of course it is also being created to provide an outlet for authors to share their knowledge about the world with others, as well as learn from others.

Readers and authors of the European Journal of International Management will encounter a wide variety of papers on international management. Both the breadth and the quality of papers are intended to make further learning about the world as interesting and as enlightening as possible. Readers who may generally have a primary interest in one or two fields of international management may find themselves wandering into others areas in order to expand their horizons about the world and about international management. This applies not only to topics in various fields of international management but also areas or regions of the world. And while the title may suggest a focus on topics and papers concentrated specifically on Europe, the reader will be pleasantly surprised to encounter a much broader focus, and thus learn more of the field broadly known, and continually growing, as international management. Please join with us in the pleasure of getting to know our great world more than ever. And remember that your comments are always welcome, as well as original paper submissions and proposals for special issues. Thank you very much for reading and using EJIM!