With a clear international and interdisciplinary approach, the International Journal of Software Engineering, Technology and Applications seek to foster discussion on both the formulation and implementation of software engineering, technology, management and applications. The journal aims to offer the reader a wealth of valuable material on theories and practices based on software engineering community and their practices.

International Journal of Software Engineering, Technology and Applications (IJSETA) is a peer reviewed journal devoted to the publication of recent and significant research in the field of software engineering and their real practices. IJSETA considers both theoretical development and application related papers. Articles in the first issue of IJSETA are selected after several rounds of meticulous review process.

On behalf of all the editorial board members, I would like to thank all researchers in the field of software engineering community who accepted our invitation to submit their scholarly work for the inaugural issue of IJSETA. I am thankful to all the editors and the reviewers who supported the journal with their valuable suggestions. I express my sincere thanks to the Inderscience Publishers who provided me the opportunity to edit an international journal with such a reputed publisher.
