Scope of the Journal

ISSN: 1741-9174 (Print), ISSN: 1741-9182 (Online)

IJASM addresses agility, responsiveness, competitiveness and management of systems, defined as regularly interacting or interdependent groups of items or bodies forming a unified whole. IJASM highlights systems specified, designed, controlled, implemented, commissioned, operated, serviced or maintained with human and society requirements in mind. Examples include engineering assets, environment, building, transport, computers, supply chains, manufacturing, enterprises, and complex engineering products such as aircraft. IJASM acknowledges the need for better understanding of content/context/processes in systems and their interaction with the ever-changing environment.

Topics covered include:

- Agile systems design/evaluation; agility theory, strategy, content, context, processes
- Agile organisation/enterprise, methodology, framework, tools, techniques
- Complex systems science, engineering of complex enduring systems
- Risk assessment, strategies for risks mitigation
- Sustainable systems design, development, operation, maintenance, services
- Supply chain agility/responsiveness, planning, execution, modelling, optimisation
- Operations/production management/strategy, process improvement
- Benchmarking, metrics/performance drivers
- Clusters, industrial districts and competitiveness
- Enterprise resource planning, modelling, architecture design, methodologies
- Complexity/uncertainty in supply chains and agile diagnostic tools
- Knowledge management, managerial effectiveness, organisational agility
- Decision support systems; performance-based contracting strategies
- Service operations/organisation agility, versatility evaluation in socio-economic systems
- Agile information/manufacturing systems/technology, rapid product/service design
