Scope of the Journal

ISSN: 2056-9432 (Print), ISSN: 2056-9440 (Online)

IJC researches the broad scope of competitiveness policies and practices across regions of the world. With emphasis on mechanisms of economic development, creation of prosperity and long-term sustainable development, IJC aspires to represent both theoretical and applied frameworks of research, at both macro and micro levels. The journal stems from the work conducted by Professor Michael Porter at the Institute of Strategy and Competitiveness and the best practices emerging from the Microeconomics of Competitiveness framework.

Contents:

IJC publishes papers that are able to show how competitiveness relates to a number of disciplines capable of building both macro and micro economic reflections. It promotes a pragmatic and easy-to-read jargon-free style, and encourages papers that develop frameworks and discover the impact of policy on the definition of processes that nurture the nexus between business, government and society, seen through the lens of competitiveness. The journal will also publish rigorously selected case studies, qualitative, quantitative and mixed methodology papers, across the spectrum of competitiveness and policy advising for clusters.

Topics covered include:

- National competitiveness
- Regional competitiveness
- Urban and sub-urban competitiveness
- Economic development and economic theory of growth
- Aggregate economics
- Economic geography
- Policies for clusters
- Agglomerate versus clusters tension
- Microeconomics of competitiveness
- Economic complexity and integrated economic systems
- Economic policy for regional development
