Scope of the Journal

ISSN: 2052-0352 (Print), ISSN: 2052-0360 (Online)

IJGSDS addresses key issues on gender studies in developing societies, including: the place of women in society; government policies to improve/empower women in developing societies; improvements to women's lives in post-independence developing societies during the last fifty years; the role of donor countries, international organisations and non-governmental agencies in the improvement/empowerment of women in developing societies. The interdisciplinary perspective of the journal acknowledges the complexity of the study of gender issues and encourages a reflective analysis of the human experience.

Topics covered include:

- Feminist, womanist and gender theories and practices
- Gender and culture
- Gender and development
- Gender and education
- Gender and the workplace
- Gender and health/health policies and rights
- Gender and politics
- Gender and the environment
- Gender, human rights and violence against women
- Women, the stem areas and research
- Globalisation/migration/sex trafficking etc.
- Bodies, popular culture and identities
- Gender equity and masculinity
