IJPLP addresses the developing area of natural medicines. Most of these could be included under 'physiotherapy', since there is no chemical compound involved in the process. There is an urgent need for the understanding of these natural medicines in terms of modern science. Biochemistry is the base of conventional western school medicine, biophysics that of many natural medicines. IJPLP not only furthers the development of natural (including many ancient) medicines, but also the further development of modern physics.
